

B R E W E R

ATTORNEYS & COUNSELORS

Peter J. Schwartz
Consultant

Peter Schwartz is a consultant (non-attorney) in the New York office of Brewer, Attorneys & Counselors.

In his role, he conducts business and economic analysis for matters in litigation and engages in writing projects for the firm.

Previously, Mr. Schwartz worked as a writer for former U.S. President Bill Clinton and New York City's bid for the Olympic Games. He is co-author of "Baseball as a Road to God: Seeing Beyond the Game," a New York Times bestselling book. He is also a former data-driven business reporter at Forbes and Bloomberg News.

Mr. Schwartz previously worked as a consultant at Anderson Economic Group, where he compiled financial assessments and business valuations. He also prepared reports for expert testimony in the areas of commercial damages and lost profits.

Mr. Schwartz earned a master's degree in law from New York University in 2012 and a bachelor's degree from NYU in journalism and sports business management in 2006.

Mr. Schwartz served as Presidential Research Scholar at New York University for five years. He was also the inaugural NYU School of Law Lisa Goldberg Fellow, awarded to a single journalist to study in-residence.

Prior to that, he was a visiting student at Yale University. He is a graduate of Upper Canada College.

Education

M.A. in Study of Law, Highest Honors, New York University, 2012

B.A. in Journalism and Sports Business Management, Highest Honors, New York University, 2006

Contact

pjs@brewerattorneys.com

212.224.8813